The tradition of actor training with masks in the modern western theatre tradition began with Jacques Copeau at the Theatre du Vieux-Columbier in 1913. Copeau was interested in finding a way to awaken the actor's imagination as well as create a state of being that directed attention toward the telling of a story rather than a total focus on the presentation of the self in performance.

About Masks in Actor Training | Theater Masks.com

Masks have been used almost universally to represent characters in theatrical performances. Theatrical performances are a visual literature of a transient, momentary kind. It is most impressive because it can be seen as a reality; it expends itself by its very revelation. The mask participates as a more enduring element, since its form is physical.
