I didnt put it to charge immediately when I came back. Now I have had it plugged on for like 2 hours and there is no sign of life. I tried my charger on another phone and though my blackberry doesnt power on when I plug it into my PC, it does detect saying device not recognized, so I think it is probably something with the battery.

Initially when I got my Classic, I looked at retrofitting Touchstone but then I got lazy. There was a thread about swapping backplates with the Verizon/ATT models, but while the non-wireless charging models have the contacts, it does NOT work if you apply a voltage. So I gave up on the wireless charging.
