The four lenses reflective model was developed by Stephen Brookfield as a tool for adult educators to consider a classroom situation from various points of view. These different perspectives of

Download Free Brookfields Four Lenses Becoming A reflection are termed as 'lenses'. The first one is the 'autobiographical lens', which as the name suggests, is for thinking about previous situations and experiences you have lived and how it may be impacting your current experience, i.e. how you emotionally or

The basis for this reflective model is the consideration of a situation from different vantage points. Once you have experienced a situation, which you need to learn from, you need to take a step back and consider this situation through what Brookfield calls “lenses”:

advocates a model of critical reflection whereby the teacher stands outside their immediate self and view what they do through four discrete lenses. Each lens reveals a different
