About Running Records | Reading A-Z

Running records are used to collect information on young readers who are still reading aloud and working on basic skills (think: those who are at reading levels aa-J). A running record captures both how well a student reads (the number of words they read correctly) and their reading behaviors (what they say and do as they read).

Teachers College started in 1880 when philanthropist, Grace Dodge, created a school in Greenwich Village to teach sewing, cooking, and other practical arts to underserved immigrant women. Through her work, Dodge had realized that a new kind of pedagogy was in order—teaching that reflected an understanding of learners' backgrounds and of how ...

About | Teachers College, Columbia University

A running record is a method of assessing reading that can be done quickly and frequently. It is an individually conducted formative assessment, which is ongoing and curriculum based. It provides a graphic representation of a student's oral reading, identifying patterns of effective and ineffective strategy use.
